Inspirations from the field

"The White Coat—Just an item of clothing!! Yet we endow it with great symbolism and power.

When I told my mother about this speech, she told me a story that she had never shared with me before. My father was a patient in the hospital where I was a resident. She remembers seeing me walking down the hall towards my father's room. I was dressed in my white coat with a group of distinguished white-coat-clad attending physicians. She explained that seeing me in my white coat with my teachers was a moment of true understanding -She turned to my father and said, 'Maureen is really a doctor!' I wonder if she realized I had also probably slept in the white coat the night before on call!"

Maureen A. Strafford, M.D.

Associate Professor of Anesthesiology and Pediatrics, Tufts University, White Coat Ceremony Keynote Speech, September 1999

"...I am... a member of my school's admissions committee and feel extremely privileged to have been invited to this meeting. The symposium ['Challenging the barriers to sustaining humanism in medicine – Focus on the medical school selection process'], made me realize that the qualities I look for in my physicians are patience, sincerity and appreciation of life and who want to share that with their patients. While many medical situations are stressful, one should still be able to sense, in their medical encounter, that the physician is truly present with them and, above all, cares about them, not as part of the bottom line but as a person. My husband is a faculty physician and works with students and residents daily. I gave him my 'Humanism in Medicine' pin and he is honored to wear it."

Assistant Dean, Saint Louis University School of Medicine, June 1998

"We can't thank you enough for your support and assistance in making the Student Clinician Ceremony a reality. The MSIII students have expressed to me how meaningful the evening was, and how honored they felt to have something so impressive planned solely for them. In addition, the honored residents thanked us profusely for their awards. 'It made my year,' said one of the selected interns."

The Proverbial Last Straw!

It was a proverbial "last straw" that brought us to Dr. Arnold Gold's office, in 1995. A few days before our son Anthony was to become a first grader, he rushed towards me and the force of his impact knocked me against a wall in our house, driving my hand into the skin of my face, narrowly missing my eye.

This was only the latest in a number of physical "accidents" in which he hurt me, and for which he would later apologize.

Anthony had been discharged from two child-care centers by age four, not for aggression but for not listening to the teacher and/or being uncooperative. His behavior at home was even worse and my husband, Rick, and I couldn't understand what caused these outbursts.

Anthony's dad, Rick, Anthony, and his mom, Susan at home

Although Anthony had graduated from kindergarten in May, and was expected to enter first grade, his behavior since then had seriously deteriorated. Anthony's expulsion from summer day camp was a huge blow to him and to us.

Dr. Laura Brent, our devoted psychologist, provided invaluable guidance in helping us get through each week with this difficult young child. Extended family gatherings, where frequently Anthony was the only youngster present, were the worst situations and his behavior would often flare up.

Expanding the Commitment

Since 1988, our organization and our programs have grown and flourished. We now work cooperatively with deans and their associates at more than 85% of American schools of medicine and osteopathy.

Two quotations continue to inspire The Arnold P. Gold Foundation staff and trustees. The first historic sentiment mirrors the philosophy and concern for the patient that we at The Gold Foundation seek to foster:

"One of the essential qualities of the clinician is interest in humanity, for the secret of the care of the patient is in caring for the patient."

Francis W. Peabody, M.D.

The other quote is by the great anthropologist Margaret Mead: "Never doubt that a small group of dedicated citizens can change the world, indeed, it is the only thing that ever has."

1999 marked the beginning of an exciting new decade for The Arnold P. Gold Foundation. Our strategic plan emphasizes humanism in medical education, focusing on improving the residency experience for young doctors, and promotes replicable models of caring hospital communities so that humanistic practitioners will have receptive environments in which to work.

A featured lecture at the national meeting of the Association of American Medical Colleges (AAMC) in Washington, D.C. on October 24 was devoted to "Humanism and Medicine." This first annual Arnold P. Gold Foundation lecture, titled "The Intersection of Science and the Soul," was delivered by the distinguished writer and physician, Jerome Groopman, M.D., Recanati Professor of Immunology at Harvard Medical School and Chief of Experimental Medicine at Beth Israel Deaconess Medical Center in Boston. His inspiring address celebrated a series of articles published this year by the prestigious journal Academic Medicine. We thank the Healthcare Foundation of New Jersey for underwriting this lecture and reception.

It is clear from the overflow audience at Dr. Groopman's lecture that our message—that humanism in medicine must be reemphasized at all levels in health care—is resonating throughout the health professions.

This attention is due, in large part, to the special group of medical school deans who have championed humanism and implemented our programs. Their enthusiastic cooperation and involvement is ultimately responsible for the rapid expansion of The Arnold P. Gold Foundation's programs. We are greatly encouraged by their collaboration and express our gratitude for their active interest, advice and wisdom as we work together to develop effective and useful tools to foster humanism in medicine.

Another group deserving credit for the success of our programs is you, our donors. Each dollar contributed to The Gold Foundation furthers our mission. Our programs reach out to more individuals in the health care professions than ever before. The Foundation especially thanks our new Golden Circle members, contributors who give an additional $25,000 or more in any given year, and we look forward to welcoming new members.

Our varied programs now address all levels of medical education from pre-medical students through the residency years. And through the Humanism in Medicine web site we are expanding our network internationally to all who are interested in this subject.

Proudly, we announce that the Robert Wood Johnson Foundation, America's largest health care philanthropy, has awarded us a new grant in 1999. It will support research and consideration of a national humanism honor society which will help to identify and recognize those medical students who demonstrate outstanding qualities associated with humanism in medicine, as well as excellence in scientific achievement.

Where the Foundation Money Goes

More than $675,000 in grants awarded in 1999 for:

- $ One hundred and four White Coat Ceremonies at U.S. schools of medicine and osteopathy, plus at all four schools of medicine in Israel, involving more than 15,000 entering medical students as well as their families this year.
- $ A new humanism curriculum designed for interns and residents being piloted at Columbia University College of Physicians & Surgeons, the University of Chicago Pritzker School of Medicine and Harvard Medical School.
- $ The Student Clinician's Ceremony, a transitional ceremony for third year medical students as they enter the clinical phase of their education, which features special awards to residents for excellence in teaching and being humanistic mentor rolemodels for medical students.
- $ Research and development of an on-line resource center for "Caring Hospital Communities," supported by the Healthcare Foundation of New Jersey.
- $ An initiative to establish a national humanism honor society recognizing medical students for outstanding compassionate patient care supported by The Robert Wood Johnson Foundation.

- $ Student and faculty initiated projects, such as Ethics Night programs and lectures on varied subjects at several medical schools.
- $ A year-long "Humanism and Medicine" series of articles in the national journal Academic Medicine.
- $ Commencement Awards at the College of Physicians & Surgeons at Columbia University for an outstanding faculty member and graduating student demonstrating excellence in science and compassionate patient care.
- $ www.humanism-in-medicine.org, our dynamic web site, supported by the Healthcare Foundation of New Jersey.
- $ Five Assistant/Associate Professorships at the Columbia University College of Physicians & Surgeons awarded to outstanding teacher-role models.
- $ Five Home Visit Programs for resident training being piloted in Virginia, New York City and Newark, NJ.
- $ Fourteen Student Summer Research Fellowships to explore community health issues for medical students at seven U.S. medical schools.
- $ Continuing research studies, professional presentations, and articles on students' attitudes toward humanism.

The Proverbial Last Straw!

The fact that he had tested as very bright at three years old made his refusal to follow instructions and his inability to get everyday tasks finished very difficult for us to understand.

Shortly after these events, we asked Dr. Brent about testing Anthony for Attention Deficit Disorder, the only diagnosis that seemed a reasonable explanation for his behavior. She then referred us to Dr. Gold. His subsequent diagnosis included Attention Deficit Hyperactivity Disorder (ADHD) and Oppositional Defiant Disorder (ODD).

Dr. Gold recommended several major changes, including a year's delay in the start of first grade, a combination of medication, behavioral therapy and parental counseling, known as the "multimodal approach." (It involves close communication with the school system.) As a result, Anthony's behavior improved dramatically.

We were not seeing full-scale rages and tantrums everyday although they still occurred. While there were frequent setbacks, improvements in emotional maturity overall were being gained an inch or even a millimeter at a time.

Dr. Gold headed the excellent clinical team that helped to save our son. His plan was implemented with the support of another critical team member, a patient and loving college student named Sara Moore, who worked with us for four years, as a nanny and a tutor. I am happy to report that four years later, a child who entered school a year late and who received very few invitations to birthday parties that first year in elementary school, recently celebrated his tenth birthday with 17 classmates. There have been many wonderful milestones for Anthony. In the Spring of 1998 he was selected to enter the gifted program in our school district, one of only ten children from approximately 150 eligible students. At the end of third grade, Anthony was honored with others as a recipient of the "President's Award." In June of 1999, he was accepted on a "traveling" soccer team, a major personal accomplishment for him.

His capacity to excel in sports was made possible because of his new ability to listen and to follow instructions. Anthony has had the opportunity to become connected with his peers, his teammates and his family thanks to personalized treatment. We thank the entire compassionate and attentive team and especially its leader, Dr. Arnold Gold.

Our Foundation Programs On the Move!

Clowning in Russia with Patch Adams

To acquire an overview of medicine and social services in the former Soviet Union, The Gold Foundation sponsored two medical students to accompany Patch Adams, M.D. to Russia in November. Donning clown costumes and assuming special new personalities for the project, Amy Auslander and Xochitl Olmos, third year medical students at Columbia University's College of Physicians & Surgeons, "made friends" in orphanages and hospitals in Moscow and St. Petersburg.

The two students, both of whom have provided leadership for The Foundation's humanism in medicine web site for nearly two years, kept journals about the trip to post on The Big Picture ... Daily Message portion of the web site. Amy's trip was underwritten by funds raised at a special event last Spring, hosted by The Foundation's new Associates Committee, a group of dynamic young individuals interested in our mission.

Supporting the Compassionate Practice of Medicine

A goal of The Gold Foundation is to encourage students to create programs and activities that support the compassionate practice of medicine. At Columbia, the student managed P&S Club received Foundation support for a new event for second year students, designed to reinforce the values of compassion and humanism emphasized at first year orientation in the White Coat Ceremony. To promote teamwork, trust, communication skills, creative problemsolving and self-challenge, the class leadership invited the entire second year class to an outdoor environment away from the classroom for one day.

From Book to Bedside

Student Clinician's Ceremonies (SCC), the new student-generated transitional program for beginning third year students, was piloted again this summer at five medical schools for a second year. The orientation programs—preparing students for the move from book to bedside—are being evaluated and the checklist for future replication of the SCC ceremony is being written. Representatives from several additional medical schools have contacted us about participating in the program next summer.

Encouraging Respect for Diversity and Communication

Pediatric residents at New York's Montefiore Medical Center, under the guidance of Dr. Alex Okun, Associate Professor of Clinical Pediatrics at the Albert Einstein College of Medicine, have joined our Home Visit Program. Other participant schools are the Dr. Jacob Handler program at Columbia, the New Jersey Medical School and the University of Virginia, where Dr. Leigh Donowitz initiated the program.

The goals of the Home Visit Program include sensitizing residents to their often culturally diverse clinic patients, providing underserved families with personalized medical service by a team of experts, and encouraging communications between residents and their mentor role-models.

Hands-on Participation and Investigation

Fourteen students at seven U.S. medical schools received grants to spend this past summer exploring a wide variety of public health issues. These students, selected by their deans, work closely with faculty mentors on projects designed to continue when the fellowships end.

Our Foundation's Summer Research Fellowships differ from most grants made available to medical students in that they support hands-on participation and investigation into community health, rather than basic laboratory research.

This year the medical schools at St. Louis, NYU and Tufts Universities were added to four other schools as recipients of these unique research fellowships.

Adina Israel at the University of Chicago conducted focus groups to learn more about the attitudes and beliefs of African-American men with HIV and AIDS in hopes of learning ways to increase patient compliance in often complex medical treatments.

At Cornell's Weill College of Medicine, Veronica Meneses and Zephaniah Okeke shared a fellowship on a continuing project geared to educate and prepare minority high school students interested in studying medicine.

Among the four students at Columbia University College of Physicians & Surgeons was Elizabeth Munro, who was awarded the 1999 Helen and Fred Waldorf Fellowship. Her project was, "Factors mediating medical adherence in HIV-infected children."

The other 1999 participants included: Holly Campbell, Renuka Jain and Gregory Vipond at Columbia; Persephone Jones and Denise Martin at the New Jersey Medical School; Elena Rios and Martina Smit at New York University; Catherine Keefe at St. Louis University and Jeffrey Polgar and Atena Rosak at Tufts University.

Correspondence From Cyberspace

"I'm happy to find this site! I think the relationship between doc and patient is basic for the healing process. I wish to learn something more with you. Thanks."

L. (Medical student) from Brazil

"I am a first year medical student and I have to say that at the start of the white coat ceremony I thought that it was a pretty hokey and downright self-aggrandizing ordeal. After all, there is no 'gavel ceremony' for students entering law school or 'gear ceremony' for engineering students. That's not to say that I didn't enjoy the program. Our speaker has left an indelible mark on me as well as my family and fiance's heart. What I didn't realize at the time was how soon we would be 'playing doctor.' Just a few weeks later we started our preceptorship. Looking back (not too far back at that) I realize now that the beginning of first year really is the beginning of our medical careers and a ceremony is an excellent way to mark such a milestone. Thank you."

"Get On Board and Help Us!"

Following the death of a good friend who struggled with cancer "in the hands of a cold scientific group of doctors," William Lippman was motivated to get involved with our Foundation. As a Trustee and Chairman of our Investment Committee for many years, he feels a sense of achievement, pride and pleasure in seeing The Foundation's growth.

Bill brings many years of expertise as Senior Vice President of Franklin Resources, Inc. and Franklin Advisors, Inc., and President and Director of Franklin Managed Trust, to leading the committee which monitors The Foundation's investments.

William and Doris Lippman.

He believes he has been fortunate to be able to participate in the work of fostering humanism in medicine and encourages his friends and family to also participate. Daughter Debbie Himmelfarb's active volunteerism with us is an indication of his success as an advocate for our work.

Bill's vision for The Foundation's future is to see that it continues to promote even more programs that emphasize humanism in medical services. "Fostering compassion is valuable," he says and hopes that more people will "get on board and help us" as "there is more work to be done."

The Golden Circle recognizes those donors who have increased their annual gifts by $25,000 or more in any one year.

New Opportunities for Leadership

To help our Trustees chart The Foundation's future, the Board recently authorized the creation of two new advisory entities: a Leadership Cabinet and a Professional Advisory Council. Charter members of the Leadership Cabinet include philanthropist and former senior partner at Deloitte & Touche, and author John Stone, M.D., Associate Dean for Admissions and Professor of Cardiology, Emory University School of Medicine, are Charter Members of the Professional Advisory Council. The individuals who are invited to join these two groups possess abilities and knowledge in diverse fields. They will help us to set priorities and to best direct our resources as we move into the 21st century. We are excited to have this opportunity to attract the participation of such talented experts who share with us a commitment to fostering humanism in medicine.

Robert Berkowitz, and attorney Brett Harris of Wilentz, Goldman Spitzer. Rita Charon, M.D., Ph.D., Professor of Clinical Medicine, Columbia University College of Physicians & Surgeons, John Stone, M.D.

Giving to The Arnold P. Gold Foundation

There are several ways to make a financial contribution to The Foundation. The easiest way is through outright gifts that will benefit us immediately. Donations of this type can be made through cash or check or through a gift of appreciated property, such as real estate or securities. Many charitable gifts may be deducted from your income taxes, however, you should contact your tax planning or legal advisor for advice about your particular situation.

All contributions are appropriately recognized with appreciation! Please join the hundreds of individuals, corporations and foundations who have become supporters of The Arnold P. Gold Foundation.

With Special Thanks

We would like to extend our appreciation to all the dedicated individuals who volunteer their time and energy to The Foundation. Thank you to volunteers Jonathan Aronson, Brian Benson and Amelia Gold, Frank Bernardo, Marzena Duda, Christopher Gamblee-Wallendjack, Usha Okoli, Paul Saltzer, Hilde Schonfeld, Dara and Jeffrey Silver, Rob Singer, Serap Thomas and Judith Vogel for helping our office to run smoothly; to interns Daniel Huberman and Margot Eves, for all of their program support; and to the Board of Trustees, who help us further our mission. The support and commitment of many individuals is vital to the role of The Foundation in fostering humanism in medicine.

IN APPRECIATION

The hundreds of individuals and organizations who made contributions to The Arnold P. Gold Foundation between November 11, 1998 and November 1, 1999 have expanded our ability to foster humanism in medicine through the support of 18 diverse and innovative programs and projects now reaching more than 18,000 new and future doctors each year.

We are particularly grateful to The Russell Berrie Foundation, The Robert Wood Johnson Foundation, Healthcare Foundation of New Jersey, The Tow Foundation, The Mellam Foundation and The Chait Foundation for their grants. The continued support from many devoted individuals and families, as well as those who increased their contributions, is also acknowledged with great appreciation.

The Board of Trustees of The Arnold P. Gold Foundation sincerely thanks all donors for making possible the growth of programs which nurture the tradition of the caring doctor. All contributions, of whatever size, are gratefully accepted and may be sent to The Arnold P. Gold Foundation, 260 Lincoln Street, Englewood, New Jersey 07631.

Special honorary and memorial gifts create a living legacy of humanism and compassion in medicine for future generations. For information about establishing a specific named fund of The Arnold P. Gold Foundation, please contact The Foundation office.

The following funds were created with gifts in honor and memory of loved ones:

In honor of Jonathan Efrem Aronson (1993)

Andrea Kilian Memorial Fund (1993)

In honor of Morgan Earle (1994) Barbara Iov Ferrer

Memorial Fund (1995)

Ariana Sue Kravet Memorial Fund (1996)

Helen and Fred Waldorf Memorial Fund (1996)

Pauline and Max Orenberg Memorial Fund (1997)

William J. McGorry Memorial Fund (1999)

Bequests...Planned Giving

Several Foundation friends have already made their wishes known to us and these planned gifts will help to ensure humanism in medicine for decades to come. We would be delighted to welcome you as a member of this group and recognize your intentions. Please contact Sandra Gold at (201) 567-4930 to add your name to our growing list.

Associates Committee Grows!

Co-chaired by Amelia Gold and Brian Benson, Foundation Trustee and first year medical student at Columbia P&S, the Associates have divided into two subcommittees: a medical students working group and an event planning committee.

The medical students group is seeking two representatives from each school of medicine and osteopathy in the New York metropolitan area. They hope to provide The Foundation with a medical student perspective and to help implement activities for students related to humanism in medicine at their respective schools. The event planning committee is pursuing many creative ideas through which to increase consciousness about the need for compassion in medicine, enlarge their network and raise funds to support Foundation programs.

Lynne and Charles Klatskin (Foundation Trustee), long time friends and benefactors, recently hosted an exquisite and lovingly prepared gourmet feast in appreciation of the valuable leadership support provided by The Foundation's Golden Circle members.
